INTRODUCTION

Scope

The main characteristic and stated objective of this bibliography is that it, within the constraints of a clearly defined framework, is comprehensive, not selective.

This implies, ideally, that the extremely time consuming task of page-to-page research (regarding bibliographic information on urban studies) of the source material should never again be necessary. If a full and complete bibliography of urban studies is accepted as the ultimate goal for urban bibliographers, the only way this author can conceive of such a goal ever being obtained is by means of a process successively building upon bibliographies each one being comprehensive in terms of the source material in question - such as the present one.

The preceding remarks constitute the justification for exhaustively and uncritically including any reference from the chosen sources that is at all relevant to the topic under consideration - urban studies.

Two sources of error will decide whether this bibliography, in terms of the stated objective, is a successor not, namely those connected with the interpretation and definition of the concept of "urban studies," and with the human factor reflected in the degree of sloppiness of the author.

It is felt that the effect of the former is minimized since the topic is chosen as "urban studies," thus including everything that has anything to do with any aspect of urbanism, rather than, say, "urban geography" where the element of subjectivity is much more crucial because of lack of a universally agreed upon (operationally speaking) definition of "geography." It has been a policy of this undertaking to include rather than omit material on the very fringe of the field of urbanism, no matter how badly it is defined. Still, of course, the definite bulk of the references can be termed as "urban geography" because of the very nature of the source material.

Sources

The source material consists of 72 major geographical periodicals, including research paper and monograph series, in USA, Canada, British Isles, Netherlands, Denmark, Finland, Sweden and Norway. The total number of entries, including crossreferences, is 2,949.

Not only major articles, but shorter references of relevance to the chosen topic are included. These are entries such as found in Geographical Record in Geographical Review, Abstracts of papers presented at the annual meetings of the Association of American Geographers in the Annals, and more recently Proceedings, of this organization, and in This Changing World in Geography.

To further assure the comprehensiveness of this study, all relevant books that have been reviewed in the sources are listed as entries.

Organization

Basically, the organization as reflected in the main index is topical.

Annotations in the traditional sense has been omitted. For practical considerations, particularly that of voluminosity, the author has found that the two approaches of comprehensiveness and annotation could not be combined in the usual manner. Therefore, the organization of the bibliography has been geared to substitute for such annotations and thus to eliminate as much as possible the potential drawback of their absence:

The 12 primary headings, all topical, are broken down to a total of 60 subheadings, most of which are also topical.

To further substitute for individual comments, two regional indices which together will pinpoint each entry geographically, if it all has a spatial reference, are included. Many entries are crossreferences, even though the number of them is sought minimized through the logic of the main index. Finally, there is an author index.

Information Policy

With the general notion in mind that an entry shall be as brief as possible, but still informative enough to inspire the reader to check out the reference itself, the information given directly for each entry, excluding what can be derived from the different indices, is name of author, year of publication, title, notation if it is an AAAG abstract, and source (volume, number of issue and page reference if it is a general entry, publisher and page reference if it is a reviewed book.) In addition, it is listed if and where the entry has been reviewed. A list of abbreviations is included.

Design and Language Policy

A general reference will look like this:

Johnston, R. J. 1966: An Index of Accessibility and Its Use in the Study of Bus Services and Settlement Patterns. TESG 57:1,33-38 which means that this article is published in 1966, in English, in Tijdschrift voor Economische en Sociale Geograpie, Volume 57, No. 1, pages 33 to 38.

A book reference will look like this:

Gottmann, J. 1961: Megalopolis: The Urbanized Northeastern Seaboard of the United States. New York: Twentieth Century Fund 810pp. (AAAG 52:3,307-17 EG 39:2,183-84 GR 52:3,452-54 PG 16:5,33-34 GJ 128:4,534-35 CGQ 9:17, 122-23).

with a similar interpretation and indicating the location of reviews in six different journals.

Regarding the Dutch and Scandinavian sources, the article or book review is included only if it is written in English, French or German or has a summary in one of these languages. The original title as well as the summary title is listed:

Tuominen, O. 1955: Taajamien vaitentusalueista (On the Spheres of Influence of Centres of Population) Terra 63:3,79-87.

A Plea to Readers

There are surely errors in this bibliography - omissional, interpretative and organizatorial as well as plain blunders. The responsibility is solely the present author's, since this has been strictly a one-man undertaking. What he hopes for is that the user of the bibliography who finds errors will tell him about them. In particular, since it is easy for them to detect errors of this sort, the authors that are represented are urged to be curious as to whether their own work is correctly listed. Absolutely no error is too small not to deserve correction with respect to, hopefully, subsequent editions, and the author will greatly appreciate comments of any sort, for instance as to:

- additional source material
- consistency of choice of source material in terms of "importance"
- omissions of relevant references from the chosen source material
- consistency of design throughout
- general design of the individual entry
- additional primary or secondary headings
- formulation of headings
- position of a given entry in relation to the chosen (sub)heading, particularly with respect to relocating entries away from Ch 10
- consistency in crossreferencing
- lacking or superfluous crossreferences
- lack of source reference in a given entry
- lacking or wrong page references
- lacking or wrong regional references
- lacking key word references
- printing errors
- etc.

Acknowledgement

The author wishes to thank Professor Chauney D. Harris, Department of Geography, University of Chicago, for his encouraging comments throughout, and for his invaluable help in digging out hard-to-get-to source material.
